

I think that hardware-based copy protection for digital television is a bad idea. It's better to leave well enough alone.